PREFACE.

THE books included in this Catalogue belonged mainly to a library formed by my father, in the early decades of this century, at his house at Brislington, near Bristol.

It has been thought well to classify them according to subjects, not only as more conducive to orderly arrangement, but also as showing the special attention paid by the collector to Topography and all branches of Natural History, as well as his general love of literature.

It will be seen that the books on Natural Science and British and Foreign Topography form the most prominent feature of the collection ; whilst the Bristol section may be more particularly mentioned, as the books, manuscripts, and numerous drawings comprised in it were a great source of interest to my father during many years of his life.

The Catalogue owes its existence entirely to the great kindness and unremitting industry of my friend Mr. Faber. Without his intelligent co-operation I should have been unable to undertake a work interesting to me on many grounds, but especially as affording an opportunity of linking the present with the past, and of giving expression, in the evening of life, to grateful feelings of filial affection and reverence.

W. JERDONE BRAIKENRIDGE.

——— Mosaic Pavements and Stained Glass. Winterton, 1796-1804. Royal folio. B.

This copy contains a dedication plate to Sir Joseph Banks ; twenty-one plates of Pavements and six plates of Glass ; a List of these plates and of Subscribers ; also the prospectus or advertisement descriptive of plates 1, 2, 11, 20, 21, printed at Hull, and of plate 12, printed at Cambridge.

A full account of this work of Fowler's is given by Lord Crawford in his "Bibliotheca Lindesiana. Collections and Notes. No. 2." He makes the entire work consist of 4 volumes with 114 plates, issued from 1796 to 1829, and says : "These plates were issued separately from the first without order, and it was not until 27 subjects had appeared that Fowler on Oct. 1, 1804, thought of gathering them into a volume and dedicating them to Sir Joseph Banks. About the end of the year 1809 another volume was completed, called an Appendix to the former and containing 27 engravings. In April, 1824, a second Appendix was completed, containing 26 plates. All these were actually published for sale, but, in addition to them, Fowler produced many other plates which were struck off merely for his own amusement or to be presented to private friends. These are now of excessive rarity." Lord Crawford arranges the plates, not in Fowler's order, but under subjects, viz., 2 dedication plates, 1 portrait, 29 mosaic pavements, 54 stained glass, 7 architectural subjects, 17 ecclesiastical details, 6 miscellaneous ; also 25 prospectuses or advertisements.
